Official Information Act request: Questions about ministers and Governor-Generals

Thank you for your Official Information Act (the Act) request received on 11 May 2026. You requested:

> a. A printed copy of "the duties pertaining to the Office of Prime Minister," and the different versions of such from 1990 onwards.
> b. Which MP's have been Ministers of Cabinet (and their assigned portfolios) since 1990?
> c. Who have been the Governor-General since 1990 and their dates of office term?

Response to your request

The information you have requested is contained in the attached release document. The release document contains the information listed in the table below.

I have interpreted your request for 'A printed copy of "the duties pertaining to the Office of Prime Minister," and the different versions of such from 1990 onwards' to be for copies of the section on the Prime Minister of the various editions of the Cabinet Manual since 1990. No document titled "the duties pertaining to the Office of Prime Minister" exists in our records.

The list of Cabinet Ministers in item 2 contains their warranted portfolios, given in the column titled 'Portfolio', and other responsibilities assigned by the Prime Minister, given in the column titled 'responsibility'.

Prime Minister

Appointment

2.2 The Prime Minister is appointed by warrant by the Governor-General. In making this appointment, constitutional convention requires the Governor-General to:

(a) act on the outcome of the electoral process and subsequent discussions between political parties. These discussions ascertain which party, or group of parties, appears able to command the confidence of the House of Representatives (expressed through public statements) and therefore has a mandate to govern the country; and

(b) act on the outcome of the political process by which the person who will lead the government as Prime Minister is identified.

Chapter 6 contains further information on government formation.

Role

2.3 The Prime Minister is the head of the government. The functions and powers of the Prime Minister have evolved over time. There is no statutory provision that constitutes the office of Prime Minister or defines its role.

2.4 The Prime Minister has several significant constitutional roles. The Prime Minister is the principal adviser to the Sovereign and to the Sovereign's representative, the Governor-General, as long as the government commands the confidence of the House and the Prime Minister maintains support as the leader of that government.

By constitutional convention, formal communication with the Sovereign is a matter for the Prime Minister. The Prime Minister advises the Sovereign on substantive matters: for example, the appointment of a new Governor-General, amendments to the Letters Patent Constituting the Office of Governor-General of New Zealand 1983 (the Letters Patent), and the conferment of royal honours.

2.6 The Prime Minister alone has the right to advise the Governor-General to:

> (a) appoint, revoke the appointment of, dismiss, or accept the resignation of Ministers;
> (b) dissolve Parliament and call a general election.

Released under the Official Information Act 1982

2.7 The Prime Minister is also the head of executive government. This role includes the task of forming and maintaining a government, which, in a proportional representation system, will often involve working with other parties. The Prime Minister determines portfolio allocations and ministerial rankings, taking into account practical and political considerations.

2.8 The Prime Minister determines the title and scope of each portfolio—that is, the portfolio's area of operation; the legislation administered within the portfolio; the agencies, Crown entities, and other organisations reporting within the portfolio; and (where necessary) the relevant Vote(s) or appropriations within Votes.

2.9 As the chair of Cabinet, the Prime Minister approves the agenda, leads the meetings, and is the final arbiter of Cabinet procedure. The Prime Minister determines the terms of reference and membership of Cabinet committees.

2.10 The Prime Minister has an important role in maintaining and coordinating the government by overseeing the government's general policy direction.

2.11 The Prime Minister customarily has overall ministerial responsibility for national security and intelligence matters, and for Ministerial Services, and may also hold other portfolios.

2.12 The Prime Minister's ministerial and executive duties are separate from the leadership role in the Prime Minister's own political party and caucus.

THE OFFICE AND ROLE OF THE PRIME MINISTER

APPOINTMENT

2.3 The Prime Minister is appointed by the Governor-General. In making this appointment, constitutional convention requires the Governor-General to:

• act on the outcome of the electoral process and subsequent discussions between political parties to ascertain which party or group of parties has the confidence of the House of Representatives and therefore a mandate to govern the country;

and

• act on the internal decision of that party or group of parties (undertaken in accordance with party rules, where applicable) as to which individual will lead the government as Prime Minister.

(See chapter 4 for further information on government formation.)

ROLE

2.4 The Prime Minister is the head of the government. The functions and powers of the Prime Minister have evolved over time, and are now well established. There is no statutory provision that establishes the office of Prime Minister or defines its role.

2.5 The Prime Minister has several key constitutional roles. As long as the Prime Minister has the confidence of the House of Representatives, he or she is the principal adviser to the Sovereign and her representative the Governor-General. 2.7 The Prime Minister determines the title and ambit of each portfolio – that is, the portfolio's area of operation, the legislation administered within the portfolio, the department(s), Crown entities and other organisations reporting within the portfolio, and (where necessary) the relevant Vote(s).

2.8 As the chair of Cabinet, the Prime Minister approves the agenda, leads the meetings and is the final arbiter of Cabinet procedure.

2.9 The Prime Minister has an important role in maintaining and coordinating the government, by overseeing the government's general policy direction.

2.10 It is customary for the Prime Minister to be Minister in charge of the Security Intelligence Service and the other intelligence services.

2.11 Aside from the Prime Minister's ministerial duties, the Prime Minister has a separate leadership role within his or her own political party and caucus.

THE OFFICE AND ROLE OF THE PRIME MINISTER

2.5 The Prime Minister is the head of the government. There is no statutory provision which establishes the office of Prime Minister, or which defines its role.

2.6 The Prime Minister is appointed by the Governor-General. In making this appointment the Governor-General, by convention, accepts the outcome of the electoral process and subsequent discussions between political parties as to which party or group of parties is to govern the country and the internal decision of that party or group of parties as to who is to lead the government.

2.7 One of the main tasks of the Prime Minister is to chair the Cabinet, which is the executive's principal decision-making body. In this role the Prime Minister usually also takes on a general coordinating responsibility across all areas of government policy.

Cabinet Office Manual 1991

A THE OFFICE AND ROLE OF THE PRIME MINISTER

A1 As the parliamentary leader of the party with the support of the House, the Prime Minister by convention is the head of the Government. There is no statutory provision which establishes the office of Prime Minister, or which generally defines its role. If the party of which the Prime Minister is leader loses its support in the House (usually as a result of a General Election) then there will generally be a change of Government and of Prime Minister. In some unusual situations, where no party has a majority of members, there may be no party or group of parties which can form a coalition or a minority government. In that case, a new General Election may have to be called.

A2 The Prime Minister is appointed by the Governor-General who, by convention, accepts the verdict of the electoral process as to which party is to govern the country, and that party's caucus decision as to who is to be leader. Accordingly, a Prime Minister who loses the leadership of the party which is in Government and which has the support of the House, also loses the office of Prime Minister.

A3 As well as being the parliamentary leader of the party which has the support of the House, the Prime Minister chairs the Cabinet which is the Executive's principal decision-making body.
